

Future Societies, Global Citizens

26 - 30 June 2017. The University of Edinburgh, United Kingdom

Join us in the beautiful and historic city of Edinburgh for a week of wonder and learning.

A call to undergraduate students in all Universitas 21 partner universities:

- Grapple with global challenges
- Widen your horizons through exploring global citizenship
- Sharpen your public speaking skills
- Engage with design thinking and innovation
- Build a global network
- Engage with Scottish culture
- Have fun!

What global challenges will face future societies and how can today's internationally minded students become global citizens?

Conference themes: development, health, justice and the environment. Under each theme we will explore the potential for active global citizenship in improving human rights, realising fundamental freedoms, expanding human knowledge, and driving innovation.

The conference will offer a unique opportunity for undergraduate scholars to hone their research, public speaking and networking skills with acclaimed academics and peers from around the world. There will also be the opportunity to participate in a variety of extracurricular events to explore Scotland's political and cultural heritage, from tours of Edinburgh Castle and the Scottish Parliament to a traditional Ceilidh dance.
